

Claire Crublet is a PhD student at the sports sciences faculty of the University of Rennes 2 (France). Her research focuses on the innovations, particularly digital ones, that are developing around hiking, and on the effects these transformations have on structuring the sports tourism market as well as on the challenges of destination attractiveness.