

Leonardo A.N. Dioko, Ph.D., or Don to many, is Professor at the Institute for Tourism Studies (IFT) Macau and Director of IFT's Tourism Research Center (itrc.ift.edu.mo), which conducts research studies about Macau's tourism development, trends, and relevant social issues. Chief of these studies are research projects commissioned by the Macau S.A.R. Government, or its various agencies, especially those relating to Macau's tourism carrying capacity and studies with policy implications. In addition to public policy research,

Don's scholarly work cover destination branding and tourism marketing, assessing and managing the impacts of rapid tourism growth, sustainable issues for cultural and heritage resources, and examining visceral aspects of travel behavior and psychology.
