

Elizabeth A. Cartier, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of Management in the School of Business Administration at Fort Lewis College. Dr. Cartier's research concentrates on tourism impacts, the critical aspects of power and control, gender and social inequality, and the relationship between discourse and power. Dr. Cartier's teaching focuses on organizational behavior, human resources, and decision-making. Dr. Cartier's practical experience was focused in the hospitality industry, where she worked in restaurants in Massachusetts, New York, and Colorado.