

Junyu Lu, Ph.D., is an assistant professor in the School of Community Resources and Development at Arizona State University and located at Hainan University-Arizona State University Joint International Tourism College. Before joining ASU, he conducted postdoctoral research at Purdue University. He completed a Ph.D. degree in Geography and a Master's degree in Applied Statistics from University of South Carolina – Columbia in 2018. His research interests are mainly in the area of travelers' behaviors, parks and recreation management, crisis response and management, and climate change and adaptation. He integrates advanced methodologies into his research areas, including advanced statistical methods, GIS techniques, high performance computing (HPC) and cloud computing.