

Maria Lexhagen, Ph.D., is an associate professor and head of the discipline of tourism studies at Mid Sweden University and Etour, Östersund, Sweden. Her research is focused on marketing and new technology and covers both business, management and consumer behavior. Her research interests include the use, impact, potentials and challenges with information technology for tourists, tourism experiences, the tourism industry at large, destination management and branding, business intelligence in tourism, as well as popular culture tourism induced by film, music and literature.