

Stefanie Benjamin currently serves as an assistant professor in the Retail, Hospitality, and Tourism Management Department at the University of Tennessee and Co Director for Tourism RESET. My agenda lies within the nexus of social equity and critical tourism scholarship exploring marginalized populations' lived experiences and counter narratives. I'm interested in producing and promoting social advocacy while amplifying underrepresented voices within the tourism landscape through practice, research, and education. As a certified qualitative researcher, I design research studies using collective storytelling, visual methodologies, social media analysis, and (auto/duo) ethnography to try and understand how race, gender, sexual orientation, disability, and White supremacy influence the travel experience and landscape. This research falls under the umbrella of where I serve as the Co-Director and Research Fellow.
