

Yang Yang, PhD is executive director of the U.S.-Asia Center for Tourism and Hospitality Research and a tenured associate professor at Temple University. Dr. Yang got Ph.D. in Geography, Master of Statistics, and M.A in Economics from University of Florida. His major research interests lie in tourism and hospitality analytics and hotel financial and real estate analysis. With a solid multi-disciplinary education background, Dr. Yang is able to thoroughly investigate research questions in the tourism and hospitality industry and offer unique insights and perspectives. His academic papers have been published in top-tier tourism and hospitality journals, and currently, Dr. Yang serves as associate editor for Annals of Tourism Research and coordinating editor for International Journal of Hospitality Management. At the same time, Dr. Yang has accumulated abundant industrial experience from various consulting projects.